Project Name:
Heritage Months & Awareness Weeks

Project Description:
The social justice programs of the University of Arizona's Center for Student Involvement & Leadership support, advocate and educate students in the areas of inequality and social injustices found in our society. Heritage Months and Awareness Weeks specifically serve as sources of information, education, and support for students. These programs provide a forum for a student voice as it pertains to all sides, opinions, and experiences related to these themes.

Student Priorities:
Expanded social responsibility and social justice programs and activities.

Anticipated Impact:
These Heritage Months & Awareness Weeks impact a wide range of students. While this programming is open to the entire community, students and student learning and development is a priority. The students currently served by UA Cultural Centers have begun to participate in larger percentages as well as an increase in partnerships with academic departments has begun to further expand the audience these events impact. However, we are very purposeful in designing our events to be significant to ALL UA students.
